

2-kroonine pangatäht 1992

2-kroon
banknote 1992

2-kroonised pangatähed trükiti 1992. aastal USA rahatrükikojas United States Banknote Company.

Esikülj

Pangatähe esiküljel on kujutatud baltisaksa loodusteadlane, antropoloog, kirjeldava ja võrdleva embrüoloogia rajaja KARL ERNST von BAER (1792–1876). Ta sündis Eestis, töötas Königsbergis, Peterburis ja Tartus. Baer oli Vene Geograafiaseltsi asutaja ja selle esimene president. 1826. aastal avastas Baer imetajate (sh inimese) munaraku.

Tagakülj

Pangatähe tagaküljel on vaade Tartu Ülikooli peahoonele. Hoone on ehitatud aastatel 1804–1809 arhitekti Johann Wilhelm Krause projekti järgi endise Maarja kiriku varemetele. Peahoone avati pidulikult 1809. aastal. Kolmekorruseline hoone on ehitatud kõrgklassitsistlikus stiilis ja paikneb tolaeagsele esindushoonele kohaselt tõstetud terrassil. Peafassaadi kuue sambaga portikusest on kujunenud Eesti kõrghariduse sümbol.

The 2-kroon banknotes were printed in 1992 in the United States Banknote Company printing plant.

Front

The front side of the 2-kroon banknote displays KARL ERNST von BAER (1792–1876) – a Baltic-German naturalist, anthropologist and the founder of descriptive and comparative embryology. He was born in Estonia and later worked in Königsberg, St. Petersburg and Tartu. Baer was the founder and first president of the Russian Geographical Society. In 1826, Baer discovered the mammalian (incl. human) ovum.

Back

The back side of the 2-kroon banknote features the main building of the University of Tartu. The building was constructed between 1804 and 1809 on the foundation of Maarja Church according to the design of the architect Johann Wilhelm Krause. It was ceremonially opened in 1809. The three-storey building is designed in the high-classicist style and it is set on a raised terrace as was appropriate for a prominent building of the era. The six-pillared portico of the main façade has become the symbol of higher education in Estonia.
